World Health Assembly Targets Education and Healthcare for Women's, Children's and Adolescents' Health

On a brisk November day, World Health Assembly (WHA) Representatives convene for the 2024 American Model United Nations Conference in Chicago to strategize and find solutions to two aspects of world health – women's, children's and adolescents' health and the public health dimension of the global drug problem. The WHA is the decision making body of the World Health Organization (WHO), composed [\[... More\]](#)

An Overview of the CCPCJ

The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) has commissioned a United Nations (UN) body dedicated to examining and analyzing issues related to crime prevention and criminal justice. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ) was officially founded in 1992 and continues to review UN standards for criminal justice as well as interpreting Member States' application of these principles. Although the Commission [\[... More\]](#)

Global Disarmament Efforts: Balancing Security and Progress in the Pursuit of Peace

The General Assembly First Committee focuses on disarmament and works to regulate conventional weapons and weapons of mass destruction (WMD) to promote global peace and security. Its efforts aim to reduce arms through measures like transparency and trust-building, using tools such as the UN Register of Conventional Arms (UNROCA). Past international agreements, have made progress, but new challenges are emerging, particularly with [\[... More\]](#)

Press Release On Literacy from GA 3

The Catholic Church as one of the world's oldest institutions has a deep and rich connection to education and literacy. Jesus is a teacher, and the Vatican recognizes and promotes this. In 2010, Catholic Charities had revenues of $4.7 billion, and many of these funds went towards increasing literacy and educational infrastructure. Organizations such as the Sisters of Charity and the order of Jesuits are [\[... More\]](#)
